Vast Opportunities, Selectivity is Critical

The global investment landscape offers investors tremendous opportunities. Separating winners from losers requires selectivity, research rigor and sound judgment.

At Davis, we place great importance on the resiliency and adaptability of our companies. We look for businesses with strong balance sheets, durable growth and skillful management. Our holdings reflect where we are opportunistically finding investments around the world.

In the United States and other developed markets, we own some of the most globally diverse multinational companies with strong long-term growth prospects and deep competitive moats. We invest in leading businesses where we believe profit margins and earnings have room to expand, yet are selling at a discount to true value.

Emerging markets offer attractive values although each country has different opportunities and risks. For example, while the overall Chinese stock market has languished, we have focused on the rapidly growing consumer services sector while avoiding the weak industrial and manufacturing sectors.

Given the quality and valuation of the companies in DWLD, we believe the portfolio is well positioned to grow shareholder wealth over the long-term.
